Read the passage below and answer Q10-11

DIRECTION: The current population explosion could yield devastating problems in the future. The world's population is rapidly outgrowing its limited food supply, and famine is a serious problem in many countries. In addition, inflation would be so intense that even people of higher income groups would not be able to buy sufficient food. The hungry would grow and their anger would cause riots to break out. Eventually, countries would begin looking to neighbouring lands for natural resources and food. And finally, with humanity's full military power unleashed, civilization as we know it would cease to exist.
